THE RIGHT CHORD.

On board a man-of-war any member of the ship's company touches his hat when he comes on deck. He would do so were there no superior officer present. He salutes the deck." The custom is typical of every sailor's sentiment of respect, admiration and affection for his vessel, if the craft be handsome and a first-class "sea boat."

was well understood by an English officer, the late Captain Hall. Captain Hall was in command of a remarkably fine frigate on the South African station, which he always kept in exquisite order, and of which he and his crew were justly proud. The handsome bust on her beautiful figure-head was
